EICHMANN TRIAL TESTIMONY BEARS WITNESS TO GREAT HEART AND HEROISM OF DANISH KING AND NATION TOWARD THREATENED JEWS, AND MANY OTHER WEST EUROPE CHRISTIANS WHO GAVE KILLER FIRST MAJOR SETBACK

The first German Christian witness to appear at the Eichmann trial, Dr. Heinrich Grueber, the Protestant Dean of both sectors of Berlin, gave evidence about Eichmann's authority in Jewish matters. Dr. Grueber worked closely with the Jewish community of Berlin following the pogroms of November 1938 and represented the Jews in negotiations with Nazi officials. Describing Eichmann during this period, the witness said, "I found him a block of ice, a block of marble. Nothing could touch him."

As regards the degree of Eichmann's authority, Dr. Grueber said that Eichmann never mentioned having to consult his superiors. "It was always 'I say this,' 'I won't permit this,' 'I,' 'I,' 'I,' as if he were the central figure." Dr. Grueber never met with any success in his negotiations with Eichmann, says Israel Digest. The witness said that he found a certain degree of sympathy among the lower officials of the Nazi hierarchy, however, and had secret contact men in most of the German Government offices.

"Such torture and torment as my Jewish friends suffered has not been described even here, where so many stories of horror and atrocity have been told," Dr. Grueber said. "In Dante's Inferno the tortured cried out in their anguish. My Jewish friends had no one to whom to cry, although their inferno was infinitely greater."

Dr. Heinrich Grueber, a leading clergyman of the Evangelical Church in West Germany, was one of the influential clergy who intervened on behalf of the Jews of Germany and, for his pains was thrown into a concentration camp himself.

An official Belgian Government report, submitted to the Court by Gavriel Bach for the prosecution, described how 25,400 Belgian Jews were transported to the East with "the most appalling acts of savagery," and only 1,276 survived.

Felix Guttmacher, a Belgian lawyer, described in an affidavit a terrible death march from the Blechnammer Camp for several days and nights in snow and biting winds without food, during which most of the marchers died or were murdered.

Dr. Joseph Melkman, head of the cultural division of the Ministry of Education and Culture, of Israel, described the Nazi campaign first to destroy the Jews of Holland economically and then to murder them. The people of Amsterdam went on strike in protest against the first deportation, to Mauthausen, and openly expressed their sympathy with Jews wearing the yellow badge, says Israel Digest. There were 140,000 Jews in Holland when the Germans invaded on May 10, 1940; 110,000 were deported, and only 8,000 of these survived.

Mr. Bach then submitted documents showing the direct connection between Eichmann and the attempt to exterminate Dutch Jewry. They proved, he said, that on some points Eichmann was even more extreme than Hitler himself. In several documents he is described as strongly opposing any exceptions in favor of particular groups or individuals.

The Court in Jerusalem heard more evidence of the Nazis' untiring efforts, under Eichmann's direction, to ensure that even the small Jewish communities of Western Europe did not escape the fate of Eastern European Jewry. Every effort was made to ensure that the Jews of Luxembourg, Denmark, Norway, and Italy should go to the gas chambers together with those of Poland and Russia.

The Nazi campaign to round up the Jews of Belgium, Holland, and Denmark and despatch them to death was described. An outstanding feature of the testimony was accounts of the courageous and largely successful effort of the Danish people to save the lives of their Jewish compatriots.

The story of how almost the entire people of Denmark, headed by King Christian, united to save the Jews of that country, was told by Werner David Melchior, son of the Chief Rabbi of Denmark, says Israel Digest. In August, 1943, the Germans worked out a detailed plan to seize all the Jews on October 1 and 2, but the Jews were warned by a German, G. F. Duckwitz. The news spread rapidly throughout Denmark and with the co-operation of Danish Government services and the masses of the people, almost all the Jews were helped to go into hiding and then evacuated to Sweden. When the Jews of Denmark escaped to Sweden, Eichmann declared that he "would have the head" of those responsible for foiling the attempt to exterminate Danish Jewry.

The Christian peoples of Western Europe were depicted in the Eichmann trial as showing on a grand scale a general sympathy and support for the persecuted Jews, says the New York Herald Tribune. The Israeli prosecution brought out that even though these feelings of sympathy were not enough to stem the holocaust which the Nazis brought upon the Jews, still they were in strong contrast to the attitudes among the non-Jewish peoples of Eastern Europe and the Baltic states.

The contrast began to develop in testimony and evidence relating to France, Italy, and Belgium, and emerged as a bright light shining through an otherwise horrifying picture of Nazi persecutions of Jews in Holland and in Denmark. The sympathy was conspicuously present — as one Jewish witness said — "from the King on down."

For spectators in the courtroom this was refreshing relief and much commented on by Israelis attending the trial. And it emerged fittingly on the eve of an important anniversary in the life of the engineer of the holocaust, Adolf Eichmann, the first anniversary of his capture in Argentina by the unidentified persons who turned him over to stand trial before a Jewish tribunal.

Evidence was given that the people of Holland engaged in numerous strikes in protest against the first restrictive measures against the Jews. A Dutch Jew testified how a non-Jewish Dutchman helped fleeing Jewish refugees to cross the borders and was finally caught, tortured, and shot for it.

The story of a Dutch gentile woman who cared for a Jewish couple's infant son throughout the war while they, in turn, took care of a Jewish woman's son through several prison camps, was related to the court, says the New York Herald Tribune. These and many other stories came out in the evidence along with others about demonstrating French students sympathizing with the Jews, and French and Italian police who refused to co-operate in persecutions.

The situation in Holland after the Nazis occupied that country and Eichmann's deputies began the roundups of the Jews for deportation to the gas chambers in the East, was detailed by one witness, Dr. Joseph Melkman, who was a teacher of classical languages in a non-Jewish secondary school in Amsterdam when the Nazis took over. He now lives in Jerusalem.

He testified that he and his wife, relinquished their fourteen-month-old boy to a gentile woman for safekeeping when they were about to be arrested, and in turn befriended similarly a young Jewish woman whose husband had been killed in a concentration camp.

On their way to the concentration camp in a horse transport car, a young girl of nineteen was carrying a boy about their son's age, and they engaged her in conversation, he testified. It developed that she had little expectation of saving the baby, and when they explained that they had special papers which gave them a chance of survival, she turned the infant over to them. She was sent to a death camp and never came back, says the New York Herald Tribune. The boy is now in Israel studying in an institute, and their own son is also in Israel.

The name of Anne Frank was mentioned only once in the testimony about Holland. That was when this same witness was asked to describe how the Jews hid and were tracked down in Holland. Dr. Melkman said that conditions in the hiding places are known to the world a little bit through Anne Frank's diary, but the aspect of this hiding which most affected him was when it involved lost, orphaned Jewish children, he said:

"I remember the case of a boy named Van Dam who was locked up for one whole year in a narrow room. He was not permitted to raise his voice, not even to speak in a normal voice. When he finally came to our camp at Westerbork, he still spoke in a whisper. When he finally understood this was no longer necessary, he started running around the prison yard very fast. He would not stop. Then he shouted at the top of his voice.

"This life in hiding was especially horrible for the children, because they never understood what was happening."

What happened to the boy? the witness was asked.

"He was sent to Auschwitz after three days," Dr. Melkman replied. Auschwitz meant a sentence to the death chamber for any child.

A blond Jewish youth named Werner Melchior, son of the Chief Rabbi who lived in Copenhagen, Denmark, when the Nazis took over, described the anti-Jewish measures in Denmark, and later the growing persecutions. He said that although the Jews gradually came to realize they were not safe, still they believed they could rely on "the general situation."

"It was common knowledge that the Danish government had quite clearly declared to the Germans that so far as the Jews were concerned, this was the basis of their attitude — that non-interference with the Jews was synonymous with non-interference in Danish internal affairs.

"And the attitude of the King was most reassuring. There were all sorts of incidents and protests which reflected the favorable attitude of the population toward the Jews."

He described how gentile students at the university where he was studying, although they were not well known to him, told him about an impending round-up of Jews and offered their help to shelter him, says the New York Herald Tribune. And how a priest, an acquaintance of his father, had offered to find the family shelter in a suburb.

Eventually he himself made his way to Sweden by small boat, and a number of Christian clergy aided the other members of his family to get to Sweden.

A major document presenting the story of the extermination of Dutch Jews was a report of a royal commission put in evidence by the prosecution. This post-war study emphasized the deliberate sadism practiced by the Gestapo in their roundups. The prosecutor gave sample:

"In July, 1943, a group of 145 people detained in the roundups in Antwerp were loaded into a metal car which was hermetically sealed and sent to the Malines concentration camp. This transfer would normally require half an hour, but through terrible, cruel sadism they found ways to extend this journey to four hours.

"When the transport reached Malines and the doors were opened, eyewitnesses saw a terrible spectacle. When this truck was opened, a thick steam came out and then there was a terrible mess of bloated bodies, bluish and red. Their eyes were protruding out of their sockets. When they were taken out of the truck, eighty people were dead."

The report lists a total of 25,400 Jews deported to Auschwitz camp, where only 1,200 of that number were saved from death. Among the deportees mentioned were 4,300 children or minors of both sexes.

Dr. Melkman, giving eyewitness testimony on this subject, said that before the first roundup of Jews in 1941 the Germans tried to incite the Dutch population against the Jews, but the Dutch strongly resisted and showed their sympathy and support all the way, says the New York Herald Tribune. He described various strikes called in the country in protest against the Germans' anti-Jewish measures.

Nevertheless, the witness said, the roundups continued with several dragnets catching 300 and 400 young men at a time. These men were taken to Mauthausen where they were presumably killed, he indicated.

In the beginning, according to the witness, the Dutch Jews did not appreciate the fate that lay ahead. The witness described how a man named Edelstein had come to Holland from Prague with permission of the Germans to show how the Dutch Jews could set up a Jewish committee and try to ameliorate their situation. Long afterwards, the witness said, he came to understand the sincerity of this man, whose words were not heeded. He testified:

"He depicted to us the situation in Czechoslovakia in very dark colors. He spoke about forced labor, and he told us that the Germans were scheming to murder us. He didn't know, of course, how, but he had the impression that this was in store for us, and he told us to hold our own and keep a stiff upper lip.

"Of course, the Dutch didn't know the situation, didn't realize the gravity of it. They saw the strikes in support of the Jews and they believed that the Dutch population would not let the Germans implement their hideous plans. He told us that the most terrible perils were attendant upon us. But his words — the handwriting on the wall — were not seriously taken by the Jews at that time."

A Jewish underground was organized by some Jewish youths, the witness said, with the movement beginning on the Dutch estates with the help of Dutch peasants. He told of a non-Jew who was active in this movement and was captured after taking refugees across the Pyrenees into Spain several times, says the New York Herald Tribune.

"This man was tortured most hideously and then he was executed," the witness said.

He testified that he and his wife were arrested in 1943 and were held at the Westerbork camp in Holland until February, 1944, when they were transferred to the Bergen-Belsen camp near Hamburg in Germany.

He said that they had reluctantly placed their infant son with a gentile woman at the last minute, and she kept the child until the end of the war.

Dr. Melkman named a Dutch camp called Elkom where SS men trained Dutch police, and did so by practicing atrocities on the inmates. He said he became aware of this when former inmates of Elkom were transferred to Westerbork for a time before being sent on for extermination at Auschwitz.

"They were human skeletons," he said. "They did not look like human beings any more."

Asked to describe a typical deportation of Jews, the witness said that a day or two before, the news would circulate around the camp that a predetermined number of prisoners would be taken away. The Jewish committee had to make up a list, and the list was always overlarge in order to make up for deaths on route because "Auschwitz always had to have the full complement."

Then would come the hour when all barracks were sealed and the barracks elders would be forced to read the alphabetical list of names. He testified:

"I must say that of all the horrible things I have retained was that night, in the middle of the night, when there was deadly silence and darkness. The names would be read out as though a death sentence was included, and if it was not you, then your relatives and friends.

"Every week this recurred — a certain number of death sentences in that hour. That created a devastating impression on all of us."

He said that early the next morning all those named went to the main highway near the railroad tracks, and there they piled into the train to be sealed in the cars, says the New York Herald Tribune. The trains were freight trains, he added, and they contained anywhere from 1,000 to 3,000 victims for the death furnaces.

He said most members of his family were at this Westerbork camp, that his brother died there of a heart attack and later his mother was removed to the Sobitor camp where only thirteen Jews survived of 33,000 sent there. She did not survive. His sister was sent to Auschwitz, he continued, and was not heard from again, and her husband was transferred

ACQUA SANTA
Acqua Santa is a mineral water originating in the Chenciano Spring, Italy. The fame of this water goes back to antiquity; known to the Etruscans and used by the Romans. Horace and Tibullus exalted the healing virtues of this water.
Acqua Santa has an elective action on the liver, regulating and reestablishing the cells' activity. It also acts beneficially on the intra and extra-hepatic biliary ducts and on the mucosa of the gall bladder.
The following conditions respond favourably to the use of Acqua Santa: Allergies, Indigestion, Somnolence, Dizziness, Abdominal distention and Diabetes. It also diminishes the cholesterol in the blood, produces an increment of certain enzymatic activities . . . lacto-oxidase, butiv-oxidase, succinoxidase . . . and increases the tio-peptic and tio-oxidizing functions of the liver.
TREATMENT: Acqua Santa should be taken as a lukewarm beverage in the morning on an empty stomach, starting with a glass of about four ounces and increasing gradually up to two or three glasses, and then gradually reducing to one glass. The treatment may last for three to five weeks and may be repeated two or three times a year.

to Mauthausen death camp where he died. His sister's three children and other relatives survived and are in Israel.

He and his wife and their small adopted boy were being transferred from the Bergen-Belsen camp to the east to be exterminated — he said he believed — when their transport encountered advancing Soviet troops and they were liberated.

Questioned about the conditions at the Bergen-Belsen camp before he was taken from it, he said it was a horror. It had become so overcrowded that disease and sanitation were killing people by the thousands.

Dr. Melkman described a widespread torture practiced in most of the concentration camps in what was apparently motivated by pure sadism. This involved the "appell" or rollcall, when all prisoners were called out on the mustering grounds and made to stand motionless. He said:

"My mother-in-law was made to stand in such a rollcall nine hours in the snow," he said. "We were not permitted to move because there was always some pretext for the Germans to say the numbers did not tally, one person was missing, and so forth. Then they would begin the count all over again, and we would have to stand there in the snow without food."

The prosecution read into the record an affidavit made by a Belgian named Felix Guttmacher, describing the treatment of Jews in that country, says the New York Herald Tribune. He was imprisoned in the Malines concentration camp, and he told how when he was arrested, the men and girls were indiscriminately mixed together and made to undress completely before each other to undergo a search.

He also described how several hundred men from his camp were invited to join labor draft in a factory where only light work would be performed. It turned out to be an armaments factory, and they were put to work in a department where sulphuric acid was a grave danger to workers. He said:

"Being Jews they were forbidden to wear masks, which were given to the other detainees. All of the 500 men of this group died within a short time from the sulphuric acid. One of the few to survive whom we saw had no nails and no eyebrows, and his body was black and yellow. Later, he died."

"It is very cold tonight. I advise you to dress your children warmly."

Mrs. Henriette Samuel, wife of the Chief Rabbi of Oslo, Norway, knew what this cryptic message meant when an emissary of the Norwegian underground telephoned her on the evening of November 25, 1942.

It was the final warning of the Gestapo (security police) round-up of Jewish women and children that took place at 5 A.M. the next day. A week earlier Rabbi Samuel had been deported with a shipload of Jewish men, says the New York Herald Tribune. He died at Auschwitz.

At the trial of Adolf Eichmann, Mrs. Samuel told how a few hours after the telephone warning she and her children were picked up by underground agents who hid them overnight in a near-by house and then carried them in a potato truck to the Swedish border.

Eichmann, the former Gestapo aide on trial for his role in the murder of millions of Jews in World War II, listened grimly to the testimony of how Scandinavians and Italians valiantly frustrated his efforts to implement the extermination of European Jews.

But he smiled briefly, for perhaps the first time during the trial, when Mrs. Samuel, a plump, vigorous woman, described with gestures how she and the children were bedded down under a tarpaulin in the truck and warned to "keep silent and behave like potato" if Germans halted the truck.

This was another day of warming testimony on the rescue of thousands of Jews by humane people, among them the late King Christian of Denmark and an anonymous Mother Superior of a convent near Rome.

Mrs. Samuel told how the Norwegian underground saved two-thirds of the small Norwegian Jewish community of about 1,700 persons.

Mrs. Hulda Campaniano, Italian-born mathematics teacher, described how many Italian Jews, were warned of approaching round-ups by the Gestapo and of how they found refuge in monasteries and convents. She and her daughter received shelter in a convent when the Mother Superior learned they were Jewish.

Perhaps the most stirring testament of humaneness was the letter of protest from the late King Christian of Denmark, assailing Nazi plans for the deportation of Danish Jews, says the New York Times. This letter, cited among the documents submitted by the prosecution, was written October 1, 1943, after the King had declared himself a prisoner of war.

The letter was addressed to the German plenipotentiary in Denmark, Dr. Werner Best. The aging King cited reports that the Germans "intend to take steps against the Jews of Denmark."

The King added sternly: "I desire to stress to you — not only because of human concern for the citizens of my country, but also because of the fear of the further consequences in future relations between Germany and Denmark — that special measures in regard to a group of people who have enjoyed full rights of citizenship in Denmark for more than 100 years, would have the most severe consequences."

The valor of King Christian and the Danish nation saved virtually all Denmark's 8,000 Jews from the transports Eichmann sent to take them to the death camps of Eastern Europe. It was Eichmann's first major setback and, according to documents submitted he took it badly.

An affidavit from Eberhard von Thadden, former Jewish affairs expert of the German Foreign Office, said that after the failure of the Gestapo action against Jews in Copenhagen, Eichmann reported to S. S. (élite guard) Reichsfuehrer Heinrich Himmler and "demanded the head of the saboteur" responsible for letting Danish Jews slip through the dragnet.

This affidavit, which Herr van Thadden made fifteen years ago for the Nuremberg war crimes trials, was accepted by the Israeli tribunal over the objections of Eichmann's counsel, Dr. Robert Servatius of West Germany. Herr von Thadden is one of the four former Nazi officials for whom the Israeli tribunal has requested examination before a West German court.

Dr. Servatius had asked that they be brought to Israel, but the court ruled this impractical after Attorney General Gideon Hausner threatened to arrest them as war criminals.

The assistant prosecutor, Gavriel Bach, submitted another Nuremberg affidavit from Dr. Rudolf Mildner, chief of the German police in Copenhagen. Dr. Mildner described the arrival of a "sonderkomando," or special unit, sent by Eichmann's office, the Jewish affairs section of the Gestapo, and headed by Eichmann's deputy, Rolf Guenther.

Eichmann's special unit caught only 202 Jews in Copenhagen, says the New York Times. In his statement to the Israeli police, Eichmann maintained that the action was "merely an ordinary evacuation operation."

Dr. Servatius insisted that a passage be read from the Mildner affidavit quoting the German plenipotentiary in Copenhagen as as having said that Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop had initiated the action against the Jews of Denmark and was "fully responsible for it."

Eichmann's methods were also frustrated in Italy, where even the Fascists were unenthusiastic about deporting Jews to death camps across the Alps.

Mrs. Campaniano, the Italian Jewish witness, said Jews had largely been left alone by the Fascist regime and had gradually developed an "it can't happen here" attitude. That attitude, she said, persisted up to September, 1943, when, after the collapse of the Mussolini regime, most of Italy was occupied by the Nazis.

When the Germans occupied Rome, 8,000 Jews, about a sixth of the Jewish population of Italy, fell into Eichmann's hands.

You can't buy a better ride than you get in the '61 OLDS!

There is no better cushioning material than "live" rubber. And you'll find it used liberally between you and the road throughout the Oldsmobile chassis . . . strategically located to snuff out road harshness —to subdue the slightest sound—to tame vibration—to leave you nothing but the enjoyment of the most wonderful ride in Oldsmobile's history!

There's a new world of roominess within the '61 Olds—behind a slimmer, trimmer exterior that's years ahead in style. It's not until you open the wider-than-ever doors—till you stretch out on the new chair-height seats—that you fully realize just how roomy this Oldsmobile is. And, of course, you're coddled in luxury that is exclusively Oldsmobile's!

And to complete the incomparable '61 Oldsmobile ride—a brand new action-packed power team! It's a new Skyrocket Engine teamed with a Hydra-Matic Drive that features Accel-A-Rotor action. Under your toe there's fiery new performance that shows its colors in the smoothest, quietest, most effortless cruising that's ever turned mountain to molehill!

Her shoulder-length illusion veil was held by a crown of crystal-beads; and she carried a bouquet, in the shape of a melon, of white roses and orchids, which was held by a chain and handle, made of white silk. Mrs. S. Gelman was matron of honour. She wore a sleeveless gown of mauve organza, with full skirt; and headdress to match; and carried a melon-shaped bouquet made of mauve violets. Elizabeth Abrams, Eileen Abrams, and Bleeme Sonnenberg, cousins of the groom, were junior bridesmaids. Each wore a gown of orchid-coloured organza, with puffed sleeves; and full skirt; and had a headband of pale orchid-coloured tulle, with sequin trimming. MONTREAL MARRIAGES

DESKIN-SIROTA

The marriage of Miss Beverley Sirota, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Sirota, 8774 Carlton Avenue, to Murray Lloyd Deskin, son of Mrs. Ruth Deskin, 8586 Birnam Avenue, and the late Jack Deskin, was solemnized at Chevra T'hilim Synagogue, on June 4, at half-past six o'clock. Rabbi Morris Werner officiated, assisted by Cantor W. Frischman. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was gowned in white, peau de soie embroidered with seed-pearl-beads and sequins; cut with a tight-fitted bodice; square neckline; long sleeves coming to points at the wrists; and full skirt, ending in a long, chapel train. Her veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a crown of seed-pearl-beads and she carried a white prayer book adorned with blue and white orchids. Miss Linda Schwartz, cousin of the groom, as maid of honour, wore a gown of blue chiffon, which had a full skirt; and a blue headdress; and carried a cascade of blue and white carnations. Sidney Deskin was best man for his brother. The ushers were: Barry Boldovitch, Barry Cherry, Terry Liebowitz, Jerry Sirota, Morris Jaslow, and Simco Giberovitch. Blue and white carnations were arranged with greenery for the wedding decorations. An orchestra played. Mrs. Sirota, mother of the bride, wore a blue, peau de soie sheath, made with a scooped neckline; and short sleeves. Her hat was of matching material; and she had a corsage of blue orchids. Mrs. Deskin, mother of the groom, was in a blue, peau de soie sheath, with a square neckline. Her hat matched it; and her corsage was of white orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Murray Lloyd Deskin left via Trans-Canada Air Lines to spend their wedding trip in Miami Beach, Florida, the bride departing in a mauve, knitted suit, with a mink stole; and had a corsage of white orchids. Here for the marriage were: Mr. and Mrs. Alex Serota, Mr. and Mrs. Murray White, and Saul Serota, of Toronto, Ont.; and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Schwartz, and Linda, of Brooklyn, N.Y.

MONTREAL MEETINGS

● CANADA-ISRAEL ●

Development Ltd.: At a meeting at the Sheraton-Mount Royal Hotel, activities of Canada-Israel Development, Ltd., were begun. The theme was the economic benefits of investment in Israel, both to that country and to the investor. Samuel Bronfman, president, described the change that had taken place during the span of thirteen years in Israel's attitude to assistance from abroad which had shifted the emphasis from gift dollars to bonds to private investments. When the Canadian Mission, which visited Israel last year, became aware of the possibilities of investment on a sound business basis in that country, it decided to participate in this new trend. Pinhas Sapir, Minister of Commerce and Industry of the State of Israel, gave a résumé of Israel's economic development during the past few years, of industrial progress which enabled exports to cover half of the imports, and which would bring about a complete balance of these two items before the end of this decade. In the establishment of new industries, harbours, petrochemical plants, shipbuilding yards, and in "development towns" in the Negev there was great opportunity for the private investor. Samuel Rothberg told the assembled businessmen of his own experiences in the setting up of Israel Investors Corporation in the U.S.A. In the brief span of two years since the formation of his Company $8,000,000 had been raised and the Company was already showing a profit. Lawrence Freiman spoke. Mr. Bronfman said that he and his family would subscribe to $500,000 worth of stock in the company. Representatives of Ontario and the Western Provinces pledged subscriptions of $2,000,000 and $1,000,000, respectively.

U. S. Chief Justice Helps Yeshiva U. To Dedicate New Unit

Yeshiva University's ten-year $30,000,000 development project, the "Blueprint for the Sixties", was started with Chief Justice Earl Warren and U. S. Senator Jacob K. Javits participating in a dedication ceremony for the first building in the program. During the colorful ceremony the Chief Justice of the United States assigned credit for the nation's great intellectual and spiritual strength to the variety of "thought, religion, tradition, and historical perspective" that has been preserved there.

"Our Nation," he stated, "is composed of many divergent ethnic groups and religious persuasions. It is our national purpose to live together in harmony and with a mutual understanding of each others aims and ambitions." The Chief Justice, who received the honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Dr. Samuel Belkin, President of Yeshiva University, also called for new high levels of excellence in all forms of human endeavor and expressed confidence in the youth of today. "I am sure that they will solve the problems of their time, even better than we have solved the problems of ours."

Senator Javits praised University officials for their enterprise and zeal. "Due to the magnificent efforts of leaders like those who you have here, you have managed to create this institution and have managed to give it pre-eminence not only in the field in which it originally started, but in the field of mathematics, in the field of medicine, in the field of medical research, and tomorrow perhaps in a dozen other fields."

At a dinner in the Leah and Joseph Rubin Residence Hall following the academic convocation, Dr. Belkin said the $30,000,000 campaign stresses the importance of Jewish contributions to higher education. "The finest opportunity for the Jewish community to participate in this important area is at Yeshiva University. We want the entire Jewish community to help us build Yeshiva University City during this next decade."

The dedication ceremony for a new $3,000,000 classroom-administration building at 185th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, Manhattan, opened the first phase of "The Blueprint for the Sixties." During the next decade two additional buildings are proposed at the Main Center in Washington Heights, another dormitory, and a gymnasium-recreation center; and an entirely new Midtown Campus as part of the Riverside Amsterdam Slum Clearance Project at West 83rd Street and Amsterdam Avenue.

Other participants in the dedication ceremony included Max J. Etra, chairman of the board of trustees; Max Stern, vice-chairman, and the Master Builders of Yeshiva University, a select group of public-spirited individuals, families, and foundations who have contributed $18,000 or more each to further Yeshiva University's plans for the next decade.

Rabbi Joseph H. Lookstein, Congregation Kehilath Jeshurun, Manhattan, professor of sociology at Yeshiva University, presented Chief Justice Warren for the degree. In conferring the degree, Dr. Belkin cited Mr. Warren as follows: "Distinguished statesman and gifted administrator. As the chief interpreter of our American constitution and supreme master of the domain of jurisprudence, you have championed the cause of justice and defended the rights of all people, regardless of race, color, or creed. Blessed with the wisdom of the heart and the courage of the mind, you are today a source of inspiration to the entire nation."

Chief Justice Warren is the second Chief Justice of the United States to become a member of the honorary alumni of Yeshiva University. In 1944, the late Harlan Fiske Stone was awarded the honorary Doctor of Laws degree at the inauguration of Dr. Belkin as the second president of Yeshiva University. The presentation to Chief Justice Stone was on the same stage and similar circumstances surrounded both ceremonies. Seventeen years ago, Dr. Belkin started the University on a development program which brought it University status, the nation's first medical college under Jewish auspices, and many other pioneering achievements. In 1944, Yeshiva University had an enrollment of 850 students in five schools. The faculty numbered 94; the school was centered in one building on its Washington Heights campus; and operated on a budget of $444,000 a year. After seventeen years of Dr. Belkin's administration, the University has an enrollment of 5,000 in seventeen schools and divisions. Its faculty numbers 1,200 scholars, with six teaching centers in the metropolitan New York area, and a budget of $13,000,000.

With the start of the $30,000,000 ten-year development program for physical development of two campuses and also a $27,000,000 expansion in the medical sciences for the institution's Albert Einstein College of Medicine, the University is undertaking the largest expansion program in its 75 years. The new classroom-administration building is the first at the Main Center in Washington Heights since completion of the Leah and Joseph Rubin Residence Hall in 1957. It will include 35 classrooms, three large lecture halls, and three conference rooms. In addition there will be a student lounge and plaza containing facilities for the college newspaper, yearbook, student council, lockers, and a bookstore. It will be ready for occupancy this fall.

The Midtown Center on 185,000 square feet of land between Amsterdam Avenue and Broadway from West 83rd Street to West 86th Street, will include classrooms for the Stern College for Women and the Teachers Institute for Women as well as the women's dormitory, and classrooms for the Graduate School of Education, the School of Social Work, and the Graduate School of Science.

Mr. Bach produced a letter from Eichmann to Herr von Thadden, proposing that all non-Italian Jews be deported, whether or not they had been sympathetic to the anti-Fascist uprising.

Mr. Bach said other documents showed that later, when Hitler ordered the deportation of 8,000 Roman Jews at Mauthausen concentration camp in Austria as hostages, Eichmann was "more extreme than the Fuehrer — he wanted to liquidate them."

Mr. Bach produced a copy of a letter from Herr von Thadden to Eichmann dated October, 1943, concerning the attitude of Pope Pius XII, says the New York Times. Herr von Thadden passed on to Eichmann a warning by the rector of the German Roman Catholic Church in Rome that the Pope might protest publicly if the arrest of Jews, which had just begun in Rome, was not halted.

The letter quoted the German Embassy official as having said that the Vatican was particularly disturbed because the arrests, "as it were, happened under the windows of the Vatican."

Eichmann was contemptuous of Italian leniency in dealing with Jews when Italy was still a full-fledged Axis partner, Mr. Bach said. When Italy still occupied the French Riviera after the collapse of French, Eichmann wrote a report for the Gestapo complaining of the continued presence of Jews in Italian-occupied areas, the assistant prosecutor charged.

Mr. Bach read passages from the report referring to "endless" exceptions made by Italian authorities in favor of Jews and continued intercession by Italian officials in many European countries.

The Italian attitude, the report said, had made some planned German anti-Jewish measures "practically impossible," since it was "in almost complete contradiction to demands put forward by the Fuehrer in every speech and proclamation."

An account of the sufferings inflicted by the Nazis on the Jewish community in Luxembourg was given in an affidavit from a former Chief Rabbi of Luxembourg, Dr. Robert Serebrenik, who lives at 509 West 110th Street in New York.

In his affidavit Dr. Serebrenik said that there were about 5,000 Jews in Luxembourg when the duchy was invaded and that he had received assurances from German military authorities that Jews would not be harmed.

Later Luxembourg was annexed to the Reich and in March, 1941 he said, he was summoned to Berlin by Eichmann to discuss the deportation of Luxembourg Jews to Lodz in German-occupied Poland, says the New York Times. Dr. Serebrenik said he eventually escaped to Portugal.

As the trial entered its second month, the prosecution ended testimony about events in Western Europe and shifted back to the Reich with an eyewitness report of the liquidation of the once flourishing Jewish community in Berlin.

Mrs. Hildegard Henschel, widow of Maurice Henschel, one-time leader of the Jewish community in Berlin, described the deportations to Poland in 1941.

A wave of despair seized Berlin Jews shortly before the first Jews were sent to Lodz, Mrs. Henschel said. About 1,200 killed themselves in Berlin alone, most of them using overdoses of Veronal, a sleep-producing drug.

Even in Berlin there were some manifestations of sympathy for Jews, Mrs. Henschel testified. She said that when her husband went to the post office after all Jews were required to wear a yellow Star of David, an official told him: "Mr. Henschel, you are wearing the Jewish star like a man wears the Iron Cross first class."

Eventually, most of the 80,000 Berlin Jews went to death camps in Poland, she testified. Some "privileged Jews," such as holders of Iron Crosses, wounded war veterans and elderly people in sound health, were sent to the model camp at Theresienstadt.

She identified a form that the Germans made all Jews they deported fill out. It contained a precise inventory of all effects down to the last pair of socks.

She said Jews had to surrender their property as payment for their "accommodation" at Theresienstadt, which had been described to the Henschels as a "home for the aged." The Henschels survived the war and came to Palestine, says the New York Times. The witness said there was some resistance at first by German industry to the deportation of workers in essential war industries.

A gentile girl's life in Israel

Almost every day of her eighteen months in Israel brought fresh surprises for this young Canadian girl. In this thought-provoking article you'll read her impressions of the new Jewish state—the near poverty of the people; their cultural development; the bitter differences in ideology between orthodox and non-orthodox; and most important of all, her discovery that the Jews in Israel do not conform to the popular conception of Jews at all.
